(En)gendering EU citizenship: caught between paid work and the market

Dr Sandra Mantu
Assistant Professor, Centre for Migration Law
Radboud University

This lecture examines how gender intersects with EU citizenship and argues that the extent to which EU citizenship rules accommodate migrating women and their experiences should be part of a critical discussion on how EU citizenship changes, recalibrates or reinforces the nexus between paid work and mobility.

A quantum leap for gender equality: for a better future of work for all

Ms Emanuela Pozzan
Senior Gender Equality and
Non-Discrimination Specialist
Gender, Equality and Diversity and ILOAIDS

Mr Umberto Cattaneo
Economist
Gender, Equality and Diversity and ILOAIDS

In 1919, the ILO adopted the first Conventions on women and work. A century later, women are a force in the labour market, breaking boundaries that at one time would have been considered impossible. While significant advances have taken place for women at work over the past century, there is no room for complacency. Progress in closing gender gaps has stalled, and in some cases is reversing. But a better future of work for women is possible, with an ecosystem of reinforcing measures and an unwavering commitment to gender equality.

The ILO's centenary provides a privileged opportunity to change the trajectory and accelerate efforts to ensure that the future delivers decent work for all women and men, in the spirit of the 2030 Agenda.
